Fighting 5th District Planning Book 2020 – 2021

For God and Country, we...

...in the American Legion, selflessly, fight for and serve those comrades who have returned and the families of those who have not.

It's a family thing.

Notes

Districts

Districts are among the most important functions in The American Legion organization. They are the representatives of posts within a defined area of a department: a "district." They are the liaisons between posts and departments, responsible for relaying information through both levels. Facilitating communication in this manner ensures the Legion operates as a national entity.

Districts provide crucial leadership and guidance. They empower and direct members to act locally, in a manner that affects the well-being of all of our nation's communities, veterans and military personnel. The result is a unified organization working toward the same established goals.

Often, district commanders assemble a team of members who assist in determining objectives and organizing projects that benefit the district and its communities and veterans. Districts are responsible for ensuring that communication flows through the public, the posts in their district, the team of individuals they've assembled, and ultimately to the department and National Headquarters.

Post leadership receives guidance and encouragement from districts who supervise posts to ensure proper execution of Legion programs or initiatives. When a post is inactive, faltering or failing altogether, districts must provide direction and assist with rebuilding and revitalization.

Committees are also established by districts. Committees conduct many of the Legion's programs, which benefit communities, veterans or military personnel. District commanders' select committee members and chairmen who are passionate about the committee's programs. Productive committees are crucial to a district's success.

Districts are always on the job. They are constantly trying to develop successful programs and activities for their districts. Even when their posts are doing well, they should communicate to department leadership their methods of success. A district commander's goal is to leave the district in better shape than when he or she took control of it.

Having been in the military, you are aware of the "Chain of Command". Well, nothing has changed, it is just one principle that we must follow to stay organized. We are not here to self-elevate. We must stay organized to better help those who need it. They are our fellow brothers and sisters. They are our family.

“Being a legion member is not about being able to visit the canteen, it’s about supporting the 4 pillars”
